

Common-sense Solutions to Keep the American Dream Alive

- Fiscal discipline to live with-in our means
- Rewarding Hard-work and Success
- Personal Responsibility

www.manjuforcongress.com

Feb 24th, 2014

Mr. Kaifesh:

Campaigns are about ideas and about which candidate has the skill and background to best represent the people. There is no better way for voters to judge this than to see and hear the candidates side by side, talking about the key issues and answering questions.

To that end, I propose our campaigns work together to set up three public debates throughout the district, open to the public and the media. To keep our discussions focused on the issues that matter, each debate should focus primarily on a single key topic of high concern.

Based on what I hear from voters as I visit their homes and see them in public, I suggest the following topics:

- Debate 1: Ending Obamacare
- Debate 2: Bringing jobs back
- Debate 3: Cutting the size and scope of government

Location, format and other details can be worked out between our campaigns. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Manju Goel